

WAR WOUNDS FATAL TO TWO LIEUTENANTS

Deaths in Two Months Result in
Plea for Action Upon Bursum
Relief Bill.

Six world war lieutenants have died in the past two months as a result of disabilities in line of duty. This was the announcement last night by the Disabled Emergency Officers' national headquarters in the Star building in its plea for immediate action on the Bursum bill, which would give the permanently maimed emergency officers the same retirement privileges as are now allowed the disabled officers of the Regular Army, Navy and Marines and the emergency officers of the Navy and Marine Corps.

Representative Hill of Maryland, himself a former service man, is expected to insist upon early action as soon as the committee holds its first meeting this week. The national headquarters reports that a poll of the House indicates favorable action by as large a relative vote as the Senate and attention is now centered upon the military committee.

It is estimated that up to the present there are 47,000 motion picture theaters in the whole world. Of the total, America has 20,450, or nearly one-half. In the United States there are more of such places of entertainment than in the whole of Europe.

Lyles House, and Colonial Antiques to Be Preserved

LYLES HOUSE.

Preservation of the old Lyles House, at 39th and Wisconsin streets northwest, and gathering together of the scattered collection of colonial relics that it once contained are being undertaken by the Sons of the Revolution of the District of Columbia, at the suggestion of Joseph I. Keefer, one of the members.

The Lyles House, or the Rest, as it was called in the days gone by, is one of the oldest private dwellings in the District of Columbia. The house, around which hover recollections of a distant past, was started in 1700 by Charles Jones, who came from Althrop Park, England, which is within twelve miles of Sulgrave, the home of George Washington's ancestors.

First it was but a log hut supplemented with bricks which were brought from England as boat ballast in exchange for Virginia tobacco. At the death of Jones the Lyles family became owners of the property through marriage into the Jones family. They renovated the old portions and made additions. As the house passed through a process of evolution from log hut to mansion, Sarah Love became owner of the estate and she, in turn, passed it on to Thomas Marshall, the then owner of Marshall Hall.

Among his many other activities Thomas Marshall was an ardent collector of antiques and added greatly to the store of historic colonial relics gathered in the house by the former occupants. Pottery, linens, uniforms of the revolutionary troops and other interesting objects composed the collection.

When the property, which went to Mrs. W. C. Magruder, daughter of Thomas Marshall, was sold, the old collection, with all the stories it told of Washington's development, was likewise scattered.

The house, which is surrounded by a large porch on three sides and has in front a grist wheel from the first mill built in these parts at Clear Spring Manor, three miles north of Georgetown, is now owned by Lieut. Pinkney Cross of the District fire department.

The chances of an oak tree being struck by lightning are fifty-seven times greater than those of a beech.

PHILIP PATCHIN TO AID IN IMPROVING CALIFORNIA

Former D. C. Man in Big New Project to Develop San Francisco District.

Philip H. Patchin, formerly of Washington, is a leading spirit in a new movement for the larger development of central and northern California, according to Laurence W. Harris, vice chairman of the movement, who is in the city on a business trip.

Patchin is assistant to the president of the Standard Oil Company of California, K. R. Kingsbury, who is also president of the development project, and Patchin, it is reported by Mr. Harris, is taking a most active and leading part in the new organization. Just what the name of it shall be, Mr. Harris said had not yet been decided, although California Incorporated had been most favorably mentioned.

Since arrival in Washington Mr. Harris said he had heard from Patchin that the city of San Francisco had been won over to such financial support of the movement as had surpassed all precedent, and added that the drive to develop that part of California of which San Francisco is the geographical, commercial and financial center is already shedding a great white light. "Phil" Patchin is well known in State Department and newspaper circles. He was in charge of publicity for the State Department during the world war, and later returned to take a similar post for the limitation of armament conference.

DIES WHILE VISITING.

Mrs. Julia N. Fletcher Stricken in Midst of Conversation.

In the midst of conversation Mrs. Julia N. Fletcher, sixty-nine years, dropped dead while paying a visit in the apartment of Capt. R. T. Fletcher at the Cairo apartments last night.

Mrs. Fletcher's daughter, Florence, rushed to her side when she saw her mother's head drop. Death came before medical aid could be summoned. Mrs. Fletcher's daughter Florence, daughter at the Clifton apartments, was Miss Julia M. Wadsworth prior to her marriage, and comes from one of the oldest families in Washington. She was the widow of Lieut. A. H. Fletcher, U. S. N.

Besides her daughter she is survived by two sons, Robert Fletcher, 1800 22nd street, northeast; Arthur Fletcher of Baltimore and one married daughter, Mrs. A. D. Rust of Lanham, Md.
